Echo Publishing: Where every book matters

We hope that you have enjoyed the books that we have in store for you for the next six months.

While we are focused on growing the Echo list, we want to do so in a measured and thoughtful way, which allows us to stay true to our values of working closely and collaboratively with our authors, suppliers, booksellers and media supporters.

We love the books that we publish, and we want to challenge, enthrall, entertain and comfort our readers.

We embrace the new, while also respecting the tried and true.

We strive to make beautiful books that reflect our authors' vision, with the help of the many fine editors and designers who work with us, and we do this as sustainably as possible.

Above all we care. We care about what we do, we care about who we do it with and we care about how we do it.

We don't take your support for granted. We understand that we can only fulfil our authors' dreams if our books have a strong presence in your wonderful bookshops – and when potential readers can hear about them through the interviews, events and review coverage that underpin the industry.

Thank you for everything that you have done to help us. It has been a pleasure to reacquaint you with talented writers at the peak of their skills and introduce you to exciting new voices and interesting people with important stories to tell. We very much look forward to continuing to bring you beautiful books.
